

Internet Training for Engineering and Construction Solutions

Trimble has expanded its portfolio of training products with a suite of modules for the engineering and construction industry. Facilitated through a internet-based enterprise learning management system, the training modules will be available to distribution partners and customers.

The interactive training modules provide simulations of how to use Trimble solutions. The simulation modules may be used as stand-alone training tools or as an integral part of a blended training programme that encompasses e-learning and instructor-led training. Customers can access the simulation modules online and learn through hands-on training in the office or their home. An individual's training history is recorded in the enterprise learning management system, providing a way of managing and tracking each person's professional development.

---

<https://www.hydro-international.com/content/news/internet-training-for-engineering-and-construction-solutions>

---